New Alloys Needed For Future Wars

Jet Propulsion Brings Up Serious Problems.

WASHINGTON—Creation of new alloys for the jet planes of future wars have been called for by Maj. Gen. G. H. Barnes, chief of research for U. S. Ordnance.

General Barnes did not specifically mention rockets in a report to the first wartime meeting of the National Academy of Sciences. But the jet plane needs he outlined are most exactly the same as those published for rockets before this war started.

The new alloys, he said, are needed to stand extraordinary heat. This heat comes from the explosive discharge of hot gases, or of the series of separate rapid-fire explosions, which drive a jet plane or rocket.

The rocket heats in the past have been extremely high, apparently being above the jet plane heat.

"The introduction of jet propulsion into war material," General Barnes said, "creates an additional need for steel to withstand abnormal elevated temperatures. The alloys now available are costly, difficult to produce and may not be available in sufficient quantity to meet the needs of the war."

Another future war possibility is use of boron, tellurium and other chemical elements for alloying the materials that go into ordnance.

Boron, he explained, has been used in American steel-making in this war and its use is still widening. Boron, familiar to the public only as an acid for eye washes, was one of the numerous things which enabled the nation, when at war, to produce more steel.

Among the great scientific strides in this war, he said, are casting armor plate instead of rolling. Cast armor plate is stronger and more knowledge of the process. Before Mr. W. S. TAYLOR, Agent, STATE FARM MUTUAL, world's largest auto insurer, Appomattox, Va.

Wise farmer! Hauling fertilizer early, when the Authorized Swift Agent has a stock, is the way to be sure of having it when the time comes to put in your crops.

That Red Steer Fertilizer you've been counting on for the big Victory crops you want to grow, is all made, cured and waiting for you.

But we cannot hold it. It must be moved out as quickly as possible so that the space can be further utilized in making more Red Steer for more victory crops.

So, to be sure you benefit from the extra crop-making qualities you've always found in Swift's Red Steer Fertilizer, see your local agent and arrange for prompt delivery of your fertilizer needs. Today would be a good time!
